

London development lender joins NACFB

The North London-based development finance lender, Regentsmead, has announced that it has become a patron member of the National Association of Commercial Finance Brokers (NACFB).

James Bloom, chief executive of Regentsmead (pictured), commented: "We have decided to become a patron of the NACFB as we feel it is important to the industry that we are endorsing the high standards and excellent work the NACFB does. We work to the same high standards and feel we can offer a much needed service to the members of the NACFB."

Mr Bloom continued: "We very much look forward to working with the NACFB and we are very pleased to have become patrons of this excellent organisation."

Adam Tyler, chief executive of the NACFB, added: "We are delighted that Regentsmead have joined the NACFB as Patrons and will be supporting our work to encourage best practice in the broker market. We believe that brokers add real value not just to their clients, but also to lenders.

"The market is strengthened by brokers and funders working together. Regentsmead's recognition of this, and commitment to the broker market, is fantastic news. We look forward to working more closely with them."

The NACFB has its first Commercial Finance Expo, including NACFB Conference, taking place next Wednesday, the 30th of June, at The Pavillion, NEC in Birmingham.
